THE MAJORS EXPLOSION.

The mysterious disappearance of Maj. Potter caused considerable talk at the time in army circles, but the facts have never been made public.

Maj. Potter was stationed at a small post on the coast of Oregon, and the absence of telegraphic and mail facilities is except a few of his brother officers The major's special hobby was explo-

We Are Prope to Exaggerate. "What is the matter, my dear fellows" I have always noticed that people like asked the colonel kindly and with some anxiety in his voice.

I have always noticed that people like to see a high thermometer in summer and a low one in winter. When the days are warm and everybody is complain the heat, a man may look at a dozen thermometers and he will always believe that the one which registers the highest is the correct one. In winter it is just the reverse, and he has perfect confidence in the one registering the lowest. If somebody would manufacture a thermometer which would mark 110 degs, above when the temperature was actually 100 degs., and would show 10 degs, below when it was only at zero, he would have a popular instrument which in general use would supersede all other makes.
